The Dow Jones Sustainability Indices (DJSI) are a family of environmental, social and governance (ESG) investment indices developed jointly by the S&P Dow Jones Indices of the United States and RobecoSAM of Switzerland, a company specializing in sustainability investment-related research. Companies around the world are evaluated for their sustainability performance based on the numerical assessment of their economic, environmental and social sustainability, and those that are excellent performers are included in the DJSI.

For this fiscal year, about 3,500 leading companies from around the world were evaluated, and 322 (including 35 Japanese companies) were selected for inclusion in the DJSI World Index. Specifically, in the Machinery and Electrical Equipment sector, two Japanese companies, including Nabtesco, were selected. For the DJSI Asia/Pacific Index, 153 companies (of which 77 are Japanese) were selected.

Nabtesco will continue to pursue desirable relationships between the company and society and implement its corporate philosophy to contribute to the creation of a better society.
